FCC has eliminated Morse Code test requirements!

- Pass both multiple-choice examinations right in the classroom.
- FCC ham exams administered by accredited volunteer examiners in class.
- Live equipment demonstrations including long-range e-mail.
- Learn all about using single sideband for ham and marine communications.

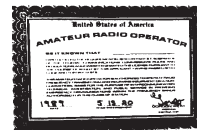

The Federal Communications Commission in their Rulemaking #05-143 has eliminated the Morse Code test requirement for the long-range General class license. Three days of classroom instruction can easily take you through both Technician class multiple-choice exams and the multiple-choice General exam. Tests are administered right in the classroom. No more Code test!

SATURDAY EVENING RADIO WORKSHOP. See live demonstrations of both ham single sideband and marine single sideband. Learn to dial in frequencies, and how to operate on a net. Learn about free long-range e-mail over ham radio. Hands-on instruction on installing the equipment, and how to easily ground to sea water. Plenty of live equipment all three days!

NO MORE CODE TEST! The Federal Communications Commission has finally ruled the elimination of all ham radio Morse Code receiving and sending tests. Our class sessions for General class will train you to send and receive basic Morse Code, but there will be no code test requirements for the General license.

- Gordon West textbooks, audio CD's, workbooks, and computer course included in the three-day class fee, $395.00
- Separate $14.00 examination fee included for both written exams. -
- *• Pre-registration and pre-study strongly recommended for test passing assurance.

Pre-registration brings in your home-study materials. Students who already hold a valid Technician class license attend Day 2 and Day 3 only, (but are invited for all three days.) $100.00 discount for licensed Technician class operators to upgrade to General class.
